Multiple Intelligences

Are all children intelligent? Intelligence is often defined as our intellectual potential; something we are born with, something that can be measured and a capacity that is difficult to change. Recently, however, other views of intelligence have emerged. One such conception is the theory of multiple intelligences proposed by Harvard psychologist Howard Gardner which has become a touchstone of education. Embracing a wide array of human talents that significantly contribute to our intellectual and cultural life, MI theory offers a broader definition of intelligence than is measured by standard IQ tests.

nobody's good at them all. With the right toy or educational aid children can improve their weak types of intelligences and become really good in all areas.

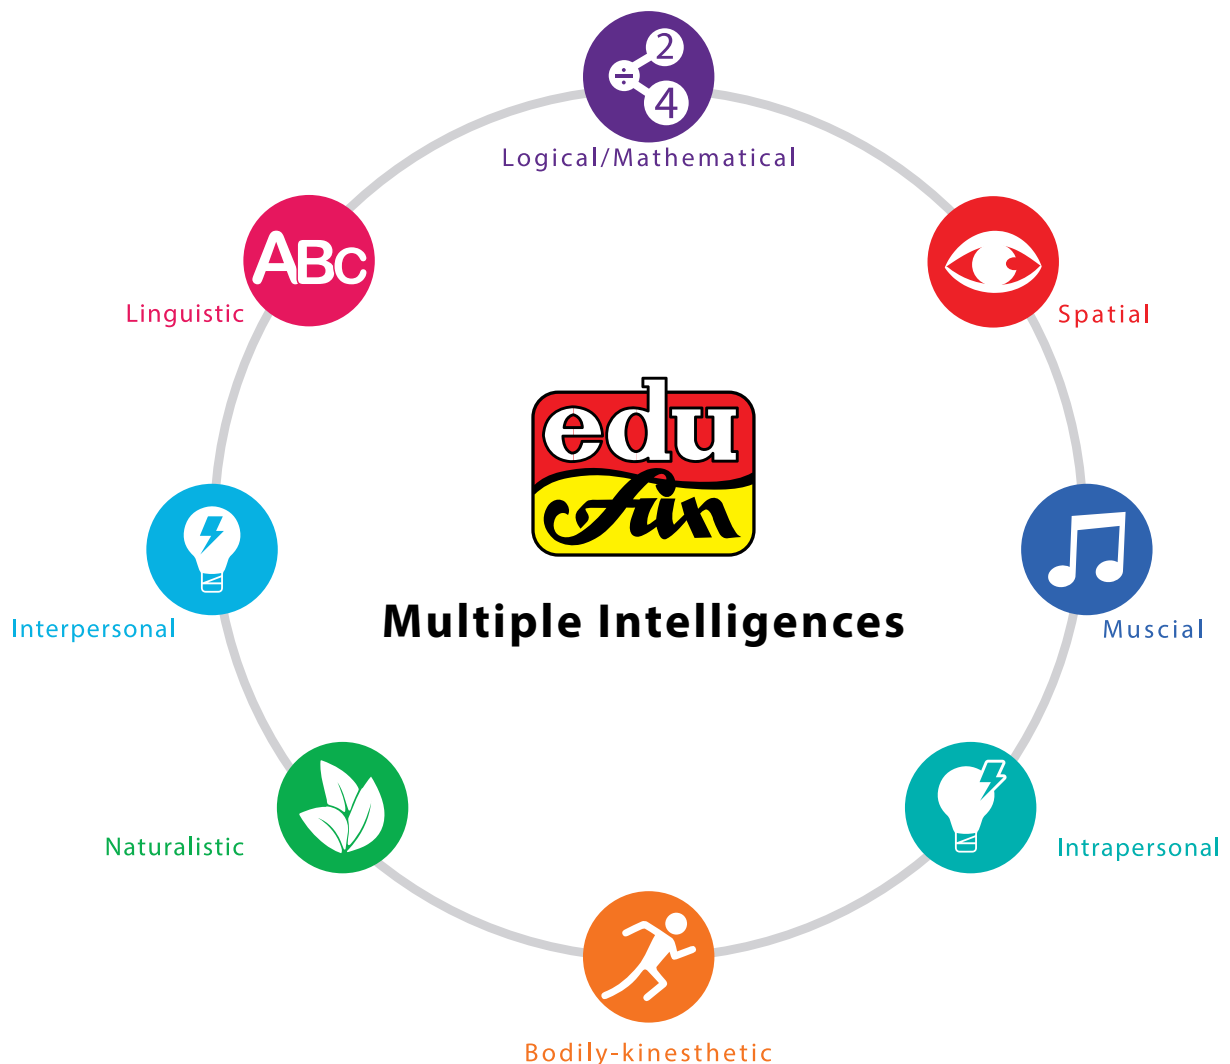

Gardner suggests that people do not have just an intellectual capacity, but have many different intelligences in order to capture the full range of abilities and talents that people possess.

He believes – and we do – that everybody has a different mind, and no two profiles of intelligence are the same.

Gardner indicates that by introducing a broader range of learning methods, (known as the intelligences) educators and indeed parents, can home in on an individual's strengths and weaknesses by determining their preferred learning style.

This would consequently give them the opportunity to learn productively in ways more to their unique minds. "If a child is not learning the way you are teaching, then you must teach in the way the child learns." (Rita Dunn).

As for Gardner there are 8 primary intelligences. An individual may excel in one, two or even three of these, but nobody's good at them all. With the right toy or educational aid children can improve their weak types of intelligences and become really good in all areas.

To know the meaning of the symbols used in this catalogue please refer to the Intelligences Chart.

Robo Board ▶

The Robo-Board trains weight transfer, dynamic balance and provide proprioceptive stimulation for children from 4 years. The Robo-Board moves easily by means of the child's weight transfer from side to side. When the child's weight is shifted to one side using muscular force and rotation around the spinal column, the child can rotate in a circular movement of up to 360 degrees. The Robo-Board can be used to help children from four years to improve their muscle coordination, body consciousness, quality of movement and sense of flow, rhythm and regulation of force in their legs which all helps in developing bodily/kinesthetic intelligence. The experienced user can get

Roller ▶

The Roller is a beautiful new conceptualization of a fundamentally challenging motor activity object. Leave it out, and you will see both children and grown-ups tempted to test their skills by stepping up and trying to set the Roller in motion. It offers a progressive motor skills challenge, from small kids just managing to keep their balance with the support of a friend or a hand rail, to older children pushing the boundaries of what they can do without falling off. Whether it is used for play or in therapy, the Roller will stimulate the primary proprioceptive sense, as well as the vestibular and tactile senses promoting bodily/kinesthetic intelligence. The Roller is safe to use, as the compression of its rubber tyres naturally reduces the speed while making play virtually silent and protecting the ground surface from damage. This is combined with a rubber tread which provides a safe grip and offers additional tactile stimulation when rolling with bare feet.

The hooks make the hanging of coats fun and safe for children making them essential for childcare centers, nurseries, elementary schools and even homes!

◀ Window Alert

This window protection is a simple solution to limiting the opening of the window, so that children cannot climb or fall through it. The Window Alert window protection makes the house safe for children and secures the house against any burglary. The Window Alert has two enclosures with lock. The spring on the plate keeps the Window Alert in place. Secure the window by closing the covers and remove the key. With this protection, the window can only be opened 10 cm. Remove the safeguard to open the window completely.
